My work schedule has been crazy this month and I have not had any time to prepare for my certification exam which is scheduled for tomorrow morning. I am worried about failing because my job requires this certification and I cannot afford to lose my position right now. I have been looking online and found that some services allow you to take my proctored exam with real human experts who know the platform well. Has anyone here actually used this kind of service for a last-minute exam and did it work out well without any problems later? I really need some honest advice from people who have been in my shoes before.
